Progressive Population. The territory of the United States is nearly as large as that of all Europe; its population, including the Aborigines and imigrants, may exceed 23,000,000, which is not a tenth part of that of Europe. In August, 1790, the United States contained nearly four millions of people, inclusive of about 700,000 slaves. In 1800 there were 5 305,925 inhabitants; 7,239,814 in 1810; 9,654,596 in 1820; 12,866,080 in 1830; and 17,063,355 in June, 1840 doubled. During 25 years, 1,588,872 persons have migrated from Great Britain and Ireland to North America, chiefly to the United States. German Philosophy.

Rev. James Martineau, of Liverpool, an eminent Unitarian of commanding influence in Great Britain, recently returned home from a residence of more than a year in Germany. On the occasion of opening for the first time the new and beautiful chapter in Hope street, Liverpool, for the use of the which he ministers on the 18th which will be found on the line of march for the ult. Mr. Martineau made some observations in regard to the value of German philosophy and theology, which may well be pondered by our own stuts and admirers of German literature. He stated, that in his hopes that he should bring home from the country of Luther some favorable tidings of the progress of its christianity, he was grievously disappointed; and that he had returned with a shilling. These are only a tow of the advantages which in fact almost every article in the Dress line, can be found at this establishment. and habits of action, and more especially with a decided preference for the popular and practical religion which prevails in this country, [England] to the intellectual and critical theology which exists and are going to give them to the people at their own pri
